

Sandbox

P4: That was always bothersome . . . the store brand ones were so uncomfortable . . . I felt like I was forced to buy the main brand because they're the only ones that comfortably worked for me.

P2: So most of the public spaces on campus, especially the women's bathrooms. They don't have menstrual products in them, or they don't have the dispensers in them.

P3: having those sort of like QR codes on there just saying like, Tell us when it's empty that way they know to refill it would be helpful and . . . response time of it would sit empty for less time than maybe it normally would . . .

P1: even the campus themselves. I feel like it's good that they have pads and tampons like out for you, but I feel like they could also put them in the stalls like having like in the stalls, like kind of hanging on the door, so you don't have to like you know, tag somebody at the door and like ask them to bring you a pad like if like, if it's just in the stall already

P1: Yeah, I think, for like off campus, they should definitely, especially with, like the areas outside of campus that are within the vicinity of the university. I feel like it wouldn't be a bad idea to like to work with the university, and see how, see what system they use and like implement that system themselves,

P4: Because if someone who needs those products but uses the men's room they have the option of grabbing those products without, you know feeling super awkward about it. So I appreciate that.

P1: And a lot of times my mom will send me stuff. So that's been like a big help.

P1: I feel like what they [my institution] have in place is a really efficient system.

P5: And I've missed school because of cramping. I've missed school because of bleeding I couldn't get under control. I've missed extracurriculars . . .

P2: And so it's definitely something that is a problem on campus. It's not very well talked about

P4: But [the campus pantry] is also inaccessible, because a lot of people don't know what it's about, and it's also in a part of campus that is no longer open

P4: And then just making it spread out through more buildings, across campus, like, even if it was standard like every single floor first bathroom is going to have products

P3: I really try not to spend a lot. I get money anxiety,
